CHALLENGE

Taking a company public on NASDAQ without spending a lot of time and money.

Zapp is an innovative company run by a team of experts from the mobility industry, not the financial industry, so they needed a simple financial reporting and SEC filing solution to go public.

As a private company, Zapp would occasionally share information with investors. This needed to change because audited financial reports and compliant SEC filings were requirements to go public, but they had very limited resources to make this happen.

SOLUTION

Saving time and money on financial reporting and SEC filings

Zapp turned to ActiveDisclosure to save time and money preparing financial reports and filing SEC disclosures. Implementation was seamless, and adoption was straightforward. ActiveDisclosure’s familiar interface with automated version control makes editing and formatting documents easier than ever. For companies like Zapp that prefer creating financial reports and filing SEC disclosures themselves, documents automatically updating when linked Excel files change is a game-changer.

In our opinion, the unaudited interim condensed consolidated financial statements contain all adjustments (consisting of only normal recurring adjustments) necessary to present fairly, T
