Storing and sharing data for fundraising, licensing, partnering and M&A

After careful reviews, La Jolla Pharmaceutical found that general-purpose file-sharing tools did not provide acceptable levels of security and privacy protection.
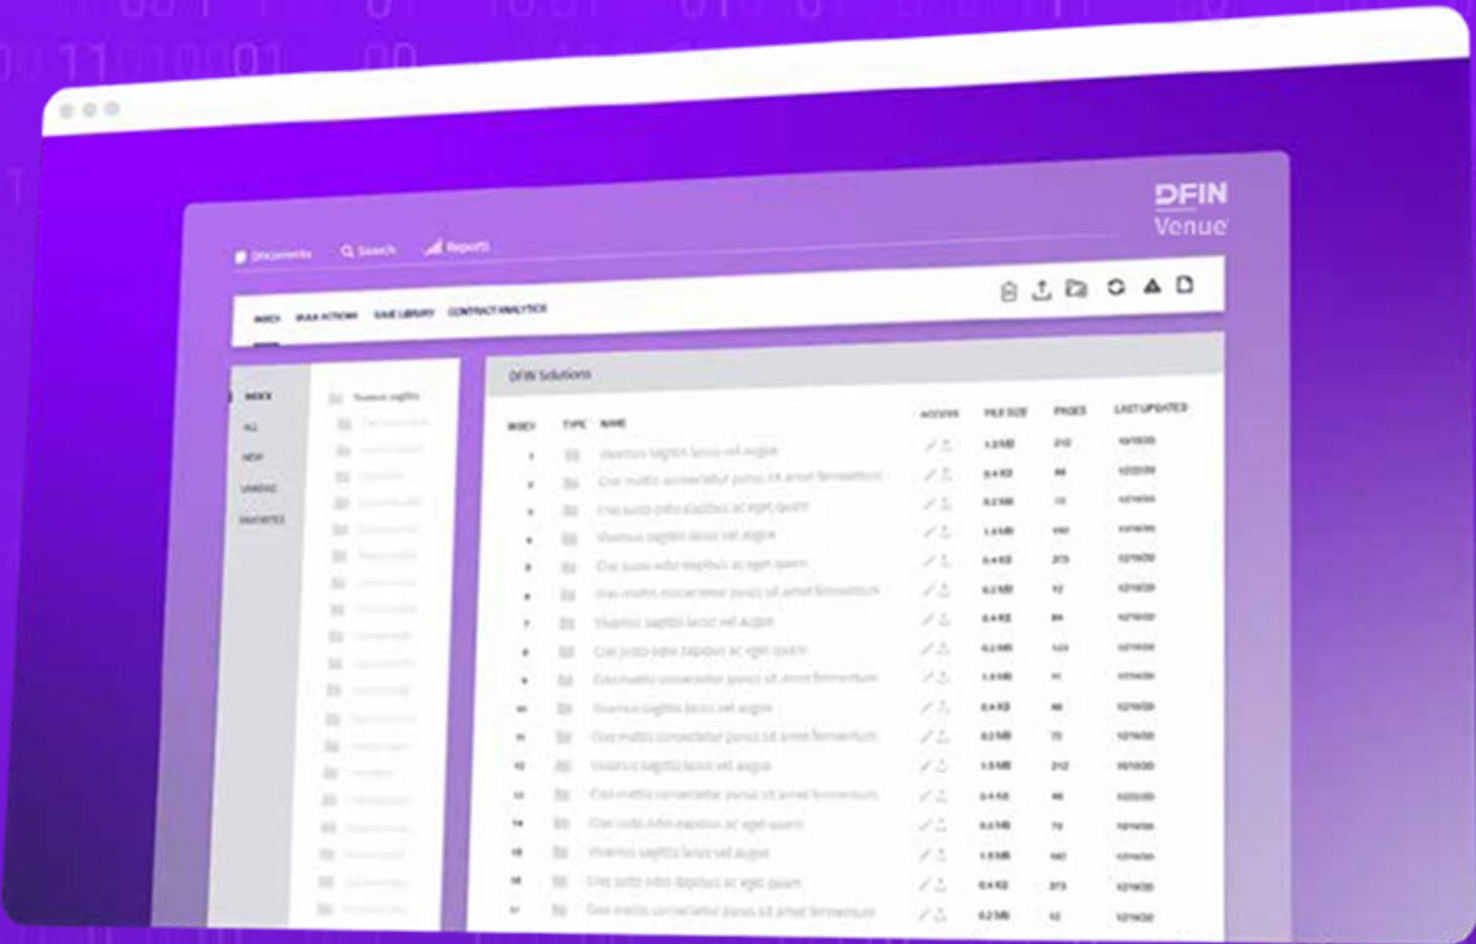

Yet, they had an ongoing need to store sensitive data in corporate repositories for sharing among internal users during projects. Also, they experienced recurring needs to share sensitive data among internal and external stakeholders to support diverse transactions.

Venue corporate repositories and virtual data rooms safeguard information

Operating within the life sciences industry involves sharing sensitive information with diverse groups of stakeholders. Venue corporate repositories store information for internal users. Venue virtual data rooms (VDRs) share information among external and internal stakeholders. Together, they help to ensure robust data security and privacy.
